Accreditation can be awarded to the following pathways: Those following the Westminster programme other than those students opting for Land Use & Transport and Traffic in Urban Areas; Those following the Arnhem second semester; Those following the Metz second semester. I should explain that the disallowed Westminster students who choose the electives above will be entitled to accreditation at MILT level and may on application to the Institute on an individual basis, have sufficient knowledge from prior learning to be elevated to chartered exemption provided the evidence can be furnished. You will be aware that your programme is deficient in two major areas of our professional requirements, namely human resource management and financial management and that most of the crucial knowledge in depth on supply chain management is contained in one core module in semester one which will limit the breadth of coverage. This is not in anyway a criticism of the programme, merely an observation of the disparity between our respective knowledge sets.
